

HOW TO VOTE.

Rules to be Observed at the Polls Tomorrow.

The following are the regulations to be observed at the polling places tomorrow. Voters should read them carefully, and be prepared to follow them:

1. The voter, immediately upon entering the polling-place, shall proceed to the table of the Chairman of Election and there identify himself as entitled to vote. Thereupon he shall receive from the said chairman a folded ballot to vote for delegates.
2. Immediately upon receiving his folded ballot from the Chairman of Election the voter must go into one of the compartments, and with the pencil provided in the compartment mark a figure on the ballot in the rectangular space thereon provided after the name of the candidate or candidates for whom he votes, showing how many votes he casts for each candidate.
3. The voter is then to re-fold the ballot just as he received it from the Chairman of Inspectors, and thus folded deliver it to the Inspector of Election in charge of the ballot box. Thereupon the voter is to leave the polling place forthwith.
4. If the voter inadvertently spoils the ballot paper he may return it to the chairman of election, who shall thereupon give him a new ballot. No voter shall be allowed to return to the chairman more than two spoiled ballots.
5. The sum total of the figure or figures placed on the ballot must not exceed the number of delegates to which the division in which he votes is entitled.
6. If the voter places any mark on the ballot by which he may be identified, his vote will be void, and the vote will not be counted.
7. No voter is allowed to take a ballot outside of the polling place.
8. If the voter hands to the inspector in charge of the ballot box any other ballot than the one given him by the chairman his ballot shall be void.

VIRTUALLY A FREE LUNCH.

An Assignee Looking For the Settlement of a Refreshment Bill.

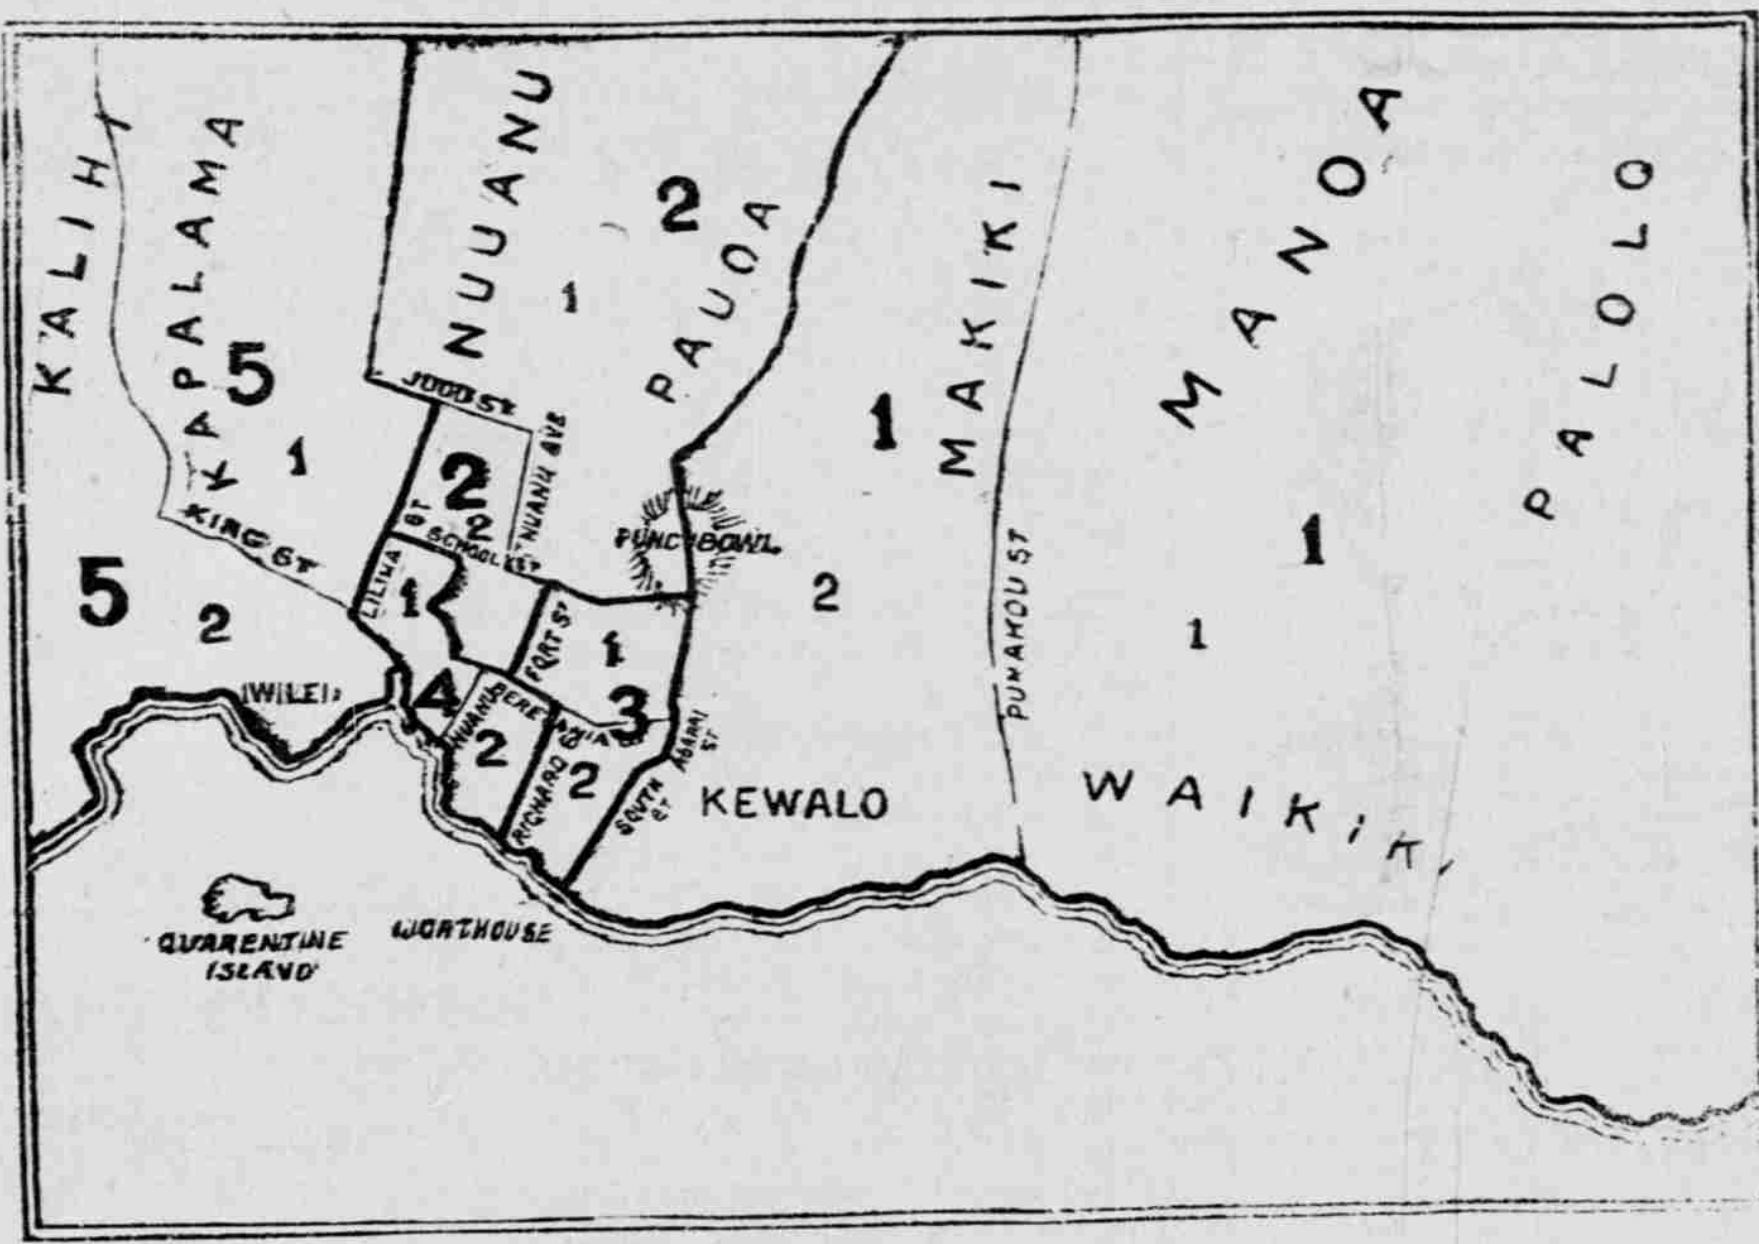

Some time ago a local social and musical organization used to meet at Arion Hall. It was not a corporation and was known as the Honolulu Arion. The mention of the name will recall to many the very pleasant dances which were given under the auspices of the club, and then again the same people will remember with satisfaction the little refreshment room where ham sandwiches and nice "sharp steams" were dealt out to thirsty dancers at the rate of six for a dollar. But all this is gone now, and is but a memory of the very hazy past, as the society has gone out of existence. The cause of the disruption is not known, but some lay the blame at the feet of the musical director, who failed to turn up one night to instruct the members so they would be able to tell the difference between "piano" and "forte." It seems that the members were very fond of singing, and when their leader deserted them the club lost members right and left, until it was impossible to get a quorum together. Then the society went under.

F. W. McChesney, as assignee of Ludwigsen & Cron, has taken a great interest in the society, and is anxious to find out everything relating to its rise and fall. He is interested because he holds a bill of about $76 for refreshments against it and he has been in doubt for some time just who he would present it to for payment, so he had a number of members of the defunct society in the District Court yesterday afternoon to find out who owed the money, and he and his attorney, W. A. Kinney, are just as much in the dark now as ever. Every witness who took the stand had a bad memory and could not recall anything about the workings of the organization. One witness admits that he was given some money and he could remember paying one bill and that was all. It was for a keg of beer. The judge reserved his decision until later in the week.

A Brutal Fight.

Two sailors of the Champion had a difference to settle yesterday, and they decided to prove their point by seeing which was the better man in a fight. The mill took place at Kapiolani park, only a chosen few being invited. It was described by one of those present to have been a most brutal affair, as the men fought with bare knuckles. Only two rounds were necessary to decide the battle.

The First, Second, Third and Fifth District Clubs will all meet at their headquarters this evening. Addresses will be made by the candidates and other prominent speakers.

MAP OF THE ELECTION DISTRICTS AND PRECINCTS OF HONOLULU.

The above map of the election districts of the city, taken from the official Government map, will be found a great convenience to any one wishing to ascertain the district and precinct in which he lives. The large figures represent districts and the small figures precincts. The heavy lines are district boundaries and the light lines precinct boundaries.
